

Getting ready is routine.

A good routine in the morning helps you make it through the day. Wake up, get out of bed, shower, dress, eat and head out the door. Everything smooth as clockwork.

But what if the routine is different?

- Instead of birds outside your bedroom window, sirens are sounding, loud and clear...
- Instead of music on the kitchen radio, emergency instructions are coming out of your Tone Alert Radio...
- Instead of coffee with the morning paper, you're taping plastic up in your safe room, or herding everyone to the car...
- Instead of heading out for work or school, your family is sheltered in place, or evacuated and heading down the road...

Like getting ready for your day, getting ready for an emergency can be routine—even an emergency at the Umatilla Chemical Depot.*

Emergencies don't happen every day, but getting ready for them does.
